The early cables today showed American stocks well above parity with the local closing prices of Monday, and upon the opening of business foreign houses were large buyers in this market. Other notably firm and active features of the railway list were Southern Railroad, Ontario and Western and the Erie issues. The induswestern and the Eric Issues. The industrial quarter was likewise strong and animated, with the exception of American Smelting in which a further decline was shown, the course of the stock being, of course, referrable to the dissension in the board of management.

The news received by the Street was good. A large number of earnings statements for the first week of February we received and almost without exception they showed a large increases. The smelters' deal is said to be progressing favorably and there seems to be little doubt that the steel deal will be announced officially shortly. As stated above, London was purchaser of American securities and it is noted among arbitrage houses generally that the disposition on the other side toward "Americans" is more favorable than is more favorable than at any time recently Carbondade, Ill., Feb. $.—Some interesting anecdotes are told by a prominent man of this city, under whose personal observation they came when the Prince of Wales visited this country under the title of Lord Rendew. It was in the fall of 185, and the Prince, with a party of $t. Louis friends, invaded this State for the purpose of shooting prairie chickens.

His success in bagging game quite carried the Prince away, figuratively, and also literally, during one hunt, for he was soon lost from both his friends and attendants in a country totally unknown to him. When he finally realized the fact the attempted to retrace his steps, but even his servant, who carried the game for him, was nowhere to be seen. Stikking out to ward the setting sun, he determined to reach some sort of habitation as quick yas possible in order that he might reach guarters, before dark.

He was quite worn out when he came upon a Scotch-irishman plowing in a field.

The Prince approached him and commanded that he hitch his horses at once to the nearby wason and drive him as specially as possible to Breeze.

The man stopped, quiefly took a quid of tobacco from his mouth, depositing it near the Prince's feet, and taking another chew stand in amazement.

Finally realizing what he meant by "wad," the Prince thrust his hand in his pocket and drew out a $5 bill. That settled it. Title or no tutle, the road was open to Breese.

"Climb in, pardner, said the as he hastily fastened his horses to the wagon.

On the road the Prince chatted familiarly with his grotesque and original friend, passing, as he afterward remarked, one of the most amusing hours of his trip through the States.

The Irishman was delighted, and his prejudice against titled heads was rapidly diminishing when, as they came in sight of Breese, they met several of the party out in quest of him.

Getting out of the wagon and mounting the horse that had been led out for him, the Prince turned to his new friend and said: "My good man, when you return home just tell your wife that you drove the Prince of Wales into Breese."

"Well, faith," said the Irishman, shifting his lines into his left hand, "an' that's a good one." Extending his hand to Wales, he said with a grin: "Shake.
